New Air-Mail Service Between United States and Chile Boosts Friendship of Two Countries

South's Cotton and Other Goods Find Market There While Chilean Nitrate, Copper and Iron Increasingly In Demand Here

THE air-mail service soon to be inaugurated by the United States Post Office Department, through a recent contract with the Pan-American Airways, Inc., between the United States and Chile, will, in the opinion of the Chilean Minister of Finance, Don Pablo Ramirez, bring about a more friendly feeling between the two nations and further extend trade relations.

goods, valued at approximately $50,000,000 annually. I predict there will be an increasing amount of raw material furnished the United States manufacturers from Chile, while Chile will continue to take increasing amounts of finished products, chiefly in the form of cotton goods, mining equipment, electrical equipment, agricultural implements, railway equipment, and other machinery for the installation of domestic industrial plants. Already Chilean industries have employed more than $650,000,000 of United States capital, mainly in her nitrate, copper and iron mines, and at the present rate of development we must look to the United States for Europe for additional assistance," Senator Ramirez said.

In the left foreground, caliche (the nitrate of soda ore) is being sorted from other rock and loaded onto cars for transporting to the extraction plant. At the plant (center) the caliche is crushed and dissolved in hot water to separate the insoluble substances from the nitrate. The solution is placed in large vats, where precipitation and crystallization of the nitrate of soda take place. Trains carrying the finished product to the Coast are observed in the right background. Workers' quarters are shown at the extreme right.

Senor Ramirez is the first cabinet official of the Chilean Government to visit a foreign country during term of office. He came to pay Chile's respects to President Hoover and to confer with American importers relative to extending the sales of nitrate of soda, one of the most valuable natural resources of his country.

He advised the American importers that the mining of nitrate of soda has senior service between New York and Santiago, Chile, will be a great step forward in bringing us closer to the United States, as well as in establishing a friendlier feeling and in adding to the rapidly-growing developments," he said.

THE SEARCHLIGHT

Hinsdale High School Hinsdale, N. H.

There is one time of the year to which every high school boy and girl look forward—Commencement.

Commencement opens the gate through which we must pass onto the rough road leading to success. It marks the farewell post of a group of young people who have set out to gain a victory.

It brings the thought back to those graduating that they must leave their Alma Mater to enter another less known world.

Although many of us know that commencement is the day that college graduates receive their various degrees; we also know that it is applied to high schools as well, and that many students have an opportunity to show their ability which has been cultivated not only in school but at home and at church as well.

ON SATURDAY, JUNE 8TH AT 10.30 A. M.

One of the privileges of my boyhood was the acquaintance with the founder of these schools. I had the opportunity of spending one year of my very early boyhood in his home on this campus, while he was abroad, and I knew many men and women in those earlier days who were his colleagues: Colonel Estey, Henry M. Moore, and the teachers of the Seminary, very particularly Misses Mary and Claire Silverthorne. And then I have known those, as you have, who in the days since his coronation have carried on so splendidly the work in Northfield Seminary.

It was my privilege to know Miss Hall, and the service she rendered to this school. Her high, exacting standard is, I am sure, a very real part of the accomplishments we are celebrating this morning.

I have the opportunity of friendship with him, who above all others, in the last thirty years has carried on the work of Northfield, and made it what it is, and whose illness and absence we regret this morning—Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Moody.

I had that privilege of working in the summer, as other boys and girls have, as an employee under one, who, although he was not a member of the faculty and his services were rendered less conspicuous, has yet made a very real contribution to the Northfield of today; the efficiency of its buildings, the beauty of its campus, one who his employees affectionately think of as "Mr. A. G."

I had the privilege of knowing the two principals of Northfield who succeeded Miss Hall, both of whom I had the privilege of sitting under as a pupil at Mount Hermon—Mr. Dickerson, and Mr. Duley.

It is a great list of names whose lives have been given into the making of this school and the one across the river.

To her who assumes the responsibility of carrying on the leadership of this school from now on, I should like to express in behalf of Hermon men and the colleges, both felicitations and Godspeed. It is a large responsibility, and we wish her all happiness and usefulness as she assumes it.

It is a trait of human nature, particularly people who have the pioneer spirit in them, to like to locate by river valleys. I think the whole history of civilization might be written in the way it has pushed up and down great river valleys of the world from the day of Abraham. You sing at Northfield of this glorious river on whose banks these two schools were providentially located. This river is one interwoven with the finest traits of American pioneer history.

Almost all great institutions have been located by rivers. Take Oxford on the Thames, and Cambridge on the Ouse. But of all the rivers I have had the privilege of knowing, I know of none as distinguished as this Connecticut river valley of ours. Trace it up from its mouth to its source; and never before in our history has any one river nurtured as many splendid educational institutions as this Connecticut of ours.

Down at the mouth at New Haven, years ago men went to establish a new colony, and from that Yale grew. A few miles further north was where the institution I have the privilege of serving was established a hundred years ago. At Hartford, where that school of the Episcopal church, Trinity, is located is just a few miles further north. At Springfield there is the college for the training of physical and spiritual leaders under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. Then just a mile or two further north that very unusual combination of colleges; Smith—with which Northfield has so many ties—Mount Holyoke, and there just across the edge of the valley, Amherst; and Massachusetts Agricultural College. Where will you get, in the space of a few square miles, so many splendid advantages for increasing and ennobling the life of youth?

Then up by Northfield, and on up to that fine pioneer institute where Eliza Wheelock went to take to the Indians ideas of education—Dartmouth. By the shores of that river-bank where Dartmouth is located today were two other institutions—Norwich and New Hampshire University.

I challenge you to find anywhere a river that has so contributed to educational advances as this one has. And so as we of Northfield and Hermon press our claims to be one of the finest institutions to be found on the banks of this noble stream we may well pause this morning to take an account of stock; to ask what Northfield has given that others have not.

If you look in Westminster Abbey for the monument of Christopher Wren you will be told the way to see his monument is to look around. If a man asked to see the monument of the founder of these schools he might be told to look around. Not so much to the hundreds of dollars worth of equipment, but to the men and women gathered here. I am reminded of the fact that the thousands unable to gather here. I am reminded of the statement he made saying when he was gone he would leave in the lives of these who had been students some noble, useful thing.

I say the 50th Anniversary is two-faced—looking backward and looking forward. Looking backward to see what we have as a heritage of the past and looking forward to see what we should carry on as the principles upon which we should build tomorrow.

I am very sure that the assets of Northfield Seminary are not to be appraised in an auditor's account, but they are to be found in the degree to which students enter into the corporate consciousness of the ideals for which this institution was founded, and stands today. There are those who go, I suppose, to even as unique and fine schools, and never enter into the corporate consciousness and ideals of the institution.

In the first place, I am sure Northfield Seminary stands supremely for faith. That may seem like a platitude, a truism, and yet I think it is a bit unique here.

Every establishment, educational or otherwise, has to be based upon the faith of the founder; and certain elements of faith in the man who founded this school, and the way in which he carried it on, make many stung with the splendor of it. Those who have entered into the corporate consciousness are people for whom faith will be a large part of their equipment for the battle of life.

When he bought these fields in order that his mother's chickens might not be disturbed, I imagine he had very little idea of what it would grow into. But like the pioneers and men of faith he went step by step, and after he found a need he had faith to go ahead and try to meet it, and so these institutions have, first of all, the faith of the pioneer who was willing to go on uncharted seas, where there was no one to follow at all.

I don't suppose in all American educational history there could be a man like Mr. Moody to establish schools. He was uneducated almost. He knew not at all about technique of education, he had never been a teacher except in Sunday school, and he knew nothing at all about technique of education, he as a student or leader, yet he attempted and succeeded in doing. Like all pioneers when he found something that needed to be done he went ahead and did it.

The ten thousand women who have gone from this school have to a large degree carried that faith of a pioneer. They have been willing to do a task perhaps they were often untrained for and as they girdle the globe—as you can find them in missionary outposts in all parts of the world, and in quiet homes in this land of ours—they have been women as I believe Hermon men have been men, who have been willing to turn their hands to a task that needed to be done, even if they had a lack of practical training for it.

And then I am very sure there also was in Mr. Moody, and should be in us, the faith of an idealist. Mr. Moody always saw the best in other people. I suppose I heard him preach a good many sermons, but I do not remember any of them. I remember every single time I saw him he had a smile on his face. His character made it easier for men and women to show their best when he was with them, because he was looking for the best within them.

I remember seeing him on the athletic field at Hermon. What a joy he used to have in all forms of competition! I think the boys over there ran just a little bit harder, faster, and better because he was watching them in this day of cynicism, in this day of debunking all our heroes, of trying to take away all the glamour and uniqueness from other people. I think it is a rather precious heritage that we who have had the contact of Mr. Moody can still have an appreciation of looking for the best in other people.

I know there are countless boys and girls who seemed to have no promise at all, but because he saw great capacity for service in them, went out and have ennobled themselves. He saw something more than a crude boy or girl. He had the faith of an internationalist. There has never been a color line in these schools; the doors have always been opened to all races. He never had the feeling we were the superior nation of the world, and should look down on other people. And in this day when the hopes of the world for people are going to depend on the appreciation of the viewpoint of other people, and seeing the best in them. There is a need for saying we have a heritage in an ideal of a man who believed that not alone here at home, but the world around men and women are worth while, and the thing to do was get their viewpoint.

He had the faith of an educator. He is a man largely known today because of the willingness to give a large part of his life to the establishment of educational institutions, and he gave a large part of his life to work among college students. He urged boys to go on and get their education. In this day some people have been worried if a person can be educated and a Christian. I believe he was far in advance of his generation in saying he had faith and believed a trained intelligence would open a man's mind to God rather than close it. He was not afraid that training the mind would wreck men's faith. He gloried in seeing them go on. There was nothing in that intellectual training that made them less useful to the cause of Jesus Christ. He knew it could be of far more use to the kingdom of God than an untrained one.

There is nothing more tragic in the present day than the suicide of college students by the scores and hundreds in Europe and here in our finest colleges. Just the other day a boy at Harvard, and then a girl at Wellesley. What can be more tragic than a boy or girl who is getting an educational training to become so pessimistic as to think life futile, with no glamour, no opportunity to live beyond the rather drab vision of today. If there is any heritage he gave to us it was a belief in an all abiding faith in something worth while further on.

He gave his life for the welfare of mankind, and every girl and boy should have a bit of that spirit of faith he gave to these institutions.

In the second place he gave not alone his faith, but also a great belief in the dignity of work. He was a poor boy and he knew the worth-whileness of work, and one of the things he preached in these schools was that good hard intellectual and physical labor was worth while and character forming. He said to the boys at Hermon that he wanted a boy who could eat soup with a one-tined fork. I am sure he was suggesting figuratively that he wanted boys who would not be stumped by things hard.

I think every boy and girl who had contact with him went out just a little bit more willing to say if it is impossible I am going to take my coat off and do it. That is a lesson and standard Mr. Moody gave here 50 years ago.

I think he would have approved of the epitaph that you can find in a little Vermont cemetery. It is the epitaph of a Vermont farmer, and it was written by his contented, cold British brother-in-law, Rudyard Kipling.

"Here lies one who did his work, and held his peace, and had no fear to die". Last of all these schools gave us all who had any share in them the feeling that trained heads are not enough. Mr. Moody said that your character is the thing that counts, and that your standards of life and practice, actually are a part of yourself.

I glory in the fact that the most supreme contribution that these schools give boys and girls on both sides of the river who have felt this influence that started with one man's life and ideals are bound in that idea of responsibility.

The speaker at our college chapel the other Sunday said that the greatest problem today was the wizen conscience of the modern age. I don't believe many of those who have felt the influence of these schools have allowed their conscience to shrivel up. The boys and girls have come out with broadened, widened consciences, willing to assume responsibility.

The fifty years past are glorious in their accomplishments and ideals. What the next fifty years are going to give I do not know. I only know it will be noble, great, in keeping with the fundamental principles of him who founded the institution, modified as may be needed to meet the demands of the age.

I have a great faith that this institution and Mount Hermon will continue to be places of faith, and appreciation of the dignity of labor, and worth-whileness of Christian character. If those things are the corner stones for the next fifty years I have an abiding confidence that these schools shall take triumphant wings on seas uncharted to great adventure.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Why Freezing Bursts Pipes.

We generally think of the principle that all things expand with heat and shrink as they cool. Why then do frozen water pipes burst? Water obeys the shrinking rule down to within a few degrees of freezing, but at freezing it expands greatly as ice is formed. This expansion bursts the pipes. (© 1929 Western Newspaper Union.)

Easy Race for Keech

Ray Keech, daring young Philadelphia driver who won the big Indianapolis 500-mile race, had a remarkably easy time of it. He never as much as raised the hood of his tiny eight-cylinder racer and never got out of his car during the gruelling five-hour grind. He stopped once to replace a blown-out tire.

We hear life murmur, we see it glisten.

Editorial

STILL ANOTHER OF OUR EDITORIALS SEEMS TO BE MAKING A HIT WITH THE BIG MEN WHO ARE REALLY DOING THINGS THAT COUNT. CHEERIO!

Our little editorial in a recent issue on the duty of every mother's son of us to attend all the good movies we possibly can and boom them in every way so as to uphold the theatre managers in providing the right kind of pictures, seems to bother a whole lot of people and makes us glad that we wrote it. Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, is one of the few who seems to think that we have hit the right nail square on the head and we are tickled pink with a dandy long personal letter from him, looking at the matter from all sides.

As most of you doubtless know Mr. Hays is employed by a bunch of the biggest and best producers of movies, for the express purpose of keeping current motion picture productions in accordance with enlightened public taste. This is a whale of a job but Will H. Hays has always handled just such items and he is swinging this with the same old good stride with which he handled the Postmaster-Generalship a few years ago.

He tells us in this recent letter that a Studio Relations Committee, including in its membership representatives from each studio, meets regularly in Hollywood. And then they have local committees from seven nationwide groups (Federal Council of Churches, Daughters of the American Revolution, National Congress of Parents and Teachers, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, American Library Association, American Association of University Women and the Boy Scouts of America) who are organizing to have committees of five from each group, each day, six days a week, pass on the results of the preliminary view of pictures to its own constituents in its own way.

Mr. Hays goes on to say: "Not only does the industry constantly seek the advice of the public in its effort to eliminate from motion picture productions anything that contravenes good taste, but with the guidance of competent scientists, we have set out to make a thorough study of the attitude-forming effect of various dramatic situations, for the purpose of guiding the producers of pictures to achieve a uniformly wholesome effect."

And then comes the milk in the cocoanut? One little child can lead a horse to water but fourteen strong men cannot make him drink? Mr. Hays puts it something like this: The level of motion picture entertainment in this country, at least, is being kept, through application of the industry's own ideals and the standards of cooperating groups, at a higher point than the public has yet demanded. . . . if the failure to support by attendance some of the highest product can be taken as a criterion. The industry has no way of compelling the public to patronize the best pictures nor of forcing parents to devote intelligent thought to the problem of selecting suitable motion picture entertainment for their children.

And so Mr. Hays believes with us THAT THE WAY TO KEEP BAD PICTURES OFF THE SCREEN IS TO ATTEND ALL THE GOOD MOVIES WE POSSIBLY CAN AND BOOM THEM IN EVERY WAY THAT WE CAN. . . . SO AS TO UP HOLD THE THEATRE MANAGERS IS PROVIDING WORTH-WHILE PICTURES.

HOW MUCH IS A BILLION DOLLARS AND WHAT IS A CHILD WORTH?

Every time a child is born to any family of our readers we just naturally rejoice. For anything that helps any of our friends, or anything that enhances the prosperity of our community is welcome news to us.

We recently quoted some statistics, furnished us by Ernest C. Holt, General Agent of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., published by that company as the result of a considerable study as to what factors tend to help make a man successful or keep him from attaining that goal. Those figures showed that married men were much more apt to succeed than men who remained single.

Now comes, from the same authoritative statistical source, figures which clearly indicate that children are real assets, that is: That a man with children has a better chance of getting on in the world than has the man who has only himself to support. Mr. Holt says his company's figures show that of 100 average men with one or no dependents, 49 succeed, 51 fail; while of 100 average men with two or more dependents, 63 succeed and only 37 fail.

We will not attempt to draw any moral nor to add or subtract a single iota from the above figures. We merely suggest that they are worthy of thought by our readers.

Mr. Brewer—Well, Mrs. Oldsome had to tell her age in court this morning.
Mrs. Brewer—I'll bet she was awfully shy.

Mr. Brewer—Oh, awfully shy, about 15 years my dear.

The Word of God
Be sure to have a Bible in your home, and a light to read by.—Proverbs 1:19-20

By Their Fruits

Matthew 7:16-20. Jesus said: Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? 17. Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. 18. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. 19. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. 20. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

PRAYER:—Father, give us the indwelling of Thy Holy Spirit that we may bear good fruit, and in our lives reflect and lift up the living Christ.

A PROCLAMATION

Every good and true American loves the American Flag. Aside from all underlying significance, the Stars and Stripes possess a beauty and a glory that are inspiring and transcendent. If that were all, however, there would be no particular occasion or importance in celebrating the day of its birth, beyond the transient enthusiasm aroused by anything that delights the eye. But the Flag is more than all that—it is the emblem of the very reason for our existence as a nation—the symbol of our unity and our strength. These one hundred and fifty-two years since its adoption have given it a character that we must preserve untarnished, a solidarity that must not be disintegrated. And as it is inconceivable that one can reverence the symbol and not the priniple for which it stands, so it is impossible to love the Flag and not the nation which it represents.

We do well to remember the glorious history of our independence and the labor and sacrifice that have made America what it is today. There are tendencies that undermine and forces that can destroy unless we strive faithfully to guard and defend the sacred principles that are the foundation of our national security and well-being.

Recognizing this responsibility and obedient to the decree of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I, therefore, proclaim Friday, June 14th, as FLAG DAY and direct that it be properly observed by flying the flag of our country and by appropriate exercises in our schools and churches. Furthermore upon the 14th day of June, 1929, and all a solemn renewal of allegiance to our Flag and to the Republic for which it stands, that it may remain one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

COMMUNITY CLUB ANNUAL MEETING

Since the executive committee was unable to secure a speaker for the Sunday evening meeting in Union hall we had a service of songs and Bible readings under the direction of Melvin Glazier, one of the committee. Rev. W. H. Glebel of East Northfield has been secured as speaker for the evening service on next Sunday.

Quite a number from here went up to the Auditorium at East Northfield last Sunday afternoon to hear the sacred concert.

Lawrence Glazier, nine years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Glazier, caught two wall-eyed pike in the Connecticut river near where he lives last Saturday evening. They were nice ones, the largest measuring sixteen and the smallest fourteen inches in length. Many older fishermen would be proud of such a catch.

The Community club held its annual business meeting in Union hall last Thursday evening. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Lewis Wood; vice-president, C. S. Tenney; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. S. Tenney; executive committee, Melvin Glazier, Esther Tenney and Mrs. Rix; reception committee, Mrs. C. L. Gilbert, Mrs. R. O. Leach and Warren Billings. A social committee is to be named by the president later.

After the business meeting an open social entertainment was put on under the direction of the social committee. This consisted of selection by the boys' orchestra, piano solos by Lyle Glazier and Marian Leach, a vocal solo by Mrs. Malcolm Billings, vocal duet by Mrs. Malcolm Billings and Lewis Wood and an original variety sketch by Warren Billings and Melvin Glazier. After the entertainment ice cream and cake was served those present and a general good time was enjoyed.

The school here closed last Friday for the summer vacation. No school session was held on Friday. The students and their teachers, Miss Dorothy Wright and Miss Evelyn Atwood, enjoyed a day's outing at Forest Lake, near Winchester, N. H. The school bus furnished their means of transportation. Lunches were taken along and the children had a great time.

Warren Billings finished work for the Millers Falls Tool Co. last Friday. On Saturday he started working at Wilcox's filling station on Federal street, Greenfield. He is driving back and forth for the present and stays with his parents here at night.

Mr. and Mrs. John Orten and son, Dick, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Allen Luey and Tom, of Port Washington, L. I., N. Y., and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Luey of Worcester spent last week-end with the W. D. Luey's.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Mann and Arthur E. Caswell of Athol were callers at the W. D. Luey's last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Stacy and family of East Northfield spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. Eva Stacy.

The Boy Scout baseball team goes to Millers Falls next Wednesday to play the Scout team of that place. The game will begin at about 6 o'clock. These two teams were evenly matched last year and we expect a close game will be played.

"MILLERS FALLS" NOW ON THE AIR MAPS

The name "Millers Falls" is now painted upon the largest roof in town, visible to passing aviators.

Millers Falls is now a real air town. This achievement has come through the public spirited action of the Millers Falls Paper company, which at its own expense painted the name of the town with the accompanying arrow-head pointing due north upon the roof of its largest building. The letters, about eight feet high and a foot and a half wide make the sign over seventy-five feet in length.

The matter of having a town air marked carries a great deal of publicity with it. All pamphlets and circulars, notices and maps show that the suggestion of the department of commerce has been complied with. Much praise is given to the Millers Falls Paper company for the loyal public spirit of co-operation with the local Board of Trade.

Class Celebration

The remaining members now living of the class of 1904, local high school are planning to celebrate their 25th anniversary by attending the reception to the class of 1929 which will be held in the town hall next Friday evening, June 21. When the 1904 class graduated there were 15 members, and death having claimed two only, it is probable that the others numbering 13 will be present.

Several of them are located throughout the United States as far west as

TURNING BACK ON FASHION IS LATE WORD OF STYLISTS

Models of H. W. Gosard display the new Sun-Tan fashions for foundation-garment, morning, beach, afternoon, and evening wear—at style show of the Associated Apparel Industries in Chicago.

Backward, turn backward! That's the newest word of fashion! It's back in! And milady must take the word literally.

The sun-tan back, the deep summery v-neck is the mode for every garment the lady of fashion puts on this season, from the skin out, it was revealed in the summer fashion parade of the Associated Apparel Industries, in Chicago recently.

The smartly turned out lady of the summer season literally wears her clothes on her back. What she wears at the front of her frock doesn't really matter. She must look chic of course, when she's coming, but what really matters is the way she looks when she's going.

The fashionable new decollete in every garment—spring morning frocks of printed cotton, afternoon frocks of sheerest Spanish lace, evening frocks of chiffon, bathing suits and negligees—they're all backless, including the modern foundation garments.

"The recent vogue for sun-tan and evenly tanned v-necks has necessitated the creation of exactly the same back-lines in every garment the truly fashionable lady wears," Kathryn Cunningham, chief designer of the H. W. Gosard Co., in charge of the summer style show, said.

"Clothes for morning, afternoon, and evening may vary as to skirt length and fabric—they may differ radically as to side and front trimming and cut—but they must follow the same line at the back."

More than 200 fashion leaders from all over the country saw the summer fashion parade of foundation-garments in Chicago. Four hundred and fifty new and different foundation garments and figure-fashions were shown.

Texas, but from latest reports they all seem to think that they can come. It may also be interesting to know that this class was the largest to ever graduate from the high school thus far.

Next Grange Meeting

The next meeting of the Wantasket Grange, P. of H., No. 133, will be held Tuesday evening June 18 instead of Wednesday, June 19. At this Tuesday evening meeting "Flora's" night will be observed and a large attendance is desired.

"Ah," said the guest as they approached the house, "I see your dear son and daughter awaiting us on the porch."

"No," said the host, "The girl in the short frock is my mother, and the young fellow in riding breeches is my wife."

Then let us one and all, be contented with our lot; The June is here this morning and the sun is shining hot; Oh, let us fill our hearts up with the glory of the day, And banish every doubt and care and sorrow far away.—Riley.

The Effective, Striking Advertisement Doesn't Just Happen.

It is the effect of careful, thoughtful planning both in the writing of it and in the mechanical composition of it.

An advertisement to be effective must have some thought and study put on the composition of it. It must tell something of the product sold, in an interesting way that they will attract attention, interest and appeal.

A well written advertisement is an invitation to every man and woman who reads it to come into the merchant's store and trade. It goes out into the homes of the community and invites them in, in a way that it would not be possible thru any other means to bring them to the store.

Good advertisements pay liberally.

SIDE-TRACKED

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

The information office had told us
when we were leaving Lausanne that the train we were taking was a through train
for Paris and that we should not have to change until we reached our destination. We got along quite satisfactorily until we reached Dijon, and then something appeared to happen. We were run off onto a siding
and there we stood.
No one offered
any information,
and we were finally awakened to the fact that we were the only passengers left in the carriage. We got off to reconnoiter, and from the guard at the station, after having pretty completely exhausted
our stock of French phrases, we discovered that we were sidetracked
for the day and that there was no other train leaving Dijon for Paris until the next morning. We were in a predicament; we had little ready money, and there seemed no easy way for us to get more. We should miss our connection in Paris, and our friends at the other end of the line
would be annoyed and disappointed.
But there was little we could do. We'd got a wrong start; we had been side-tracked, and the only thing we could do was to make the best of it. Next time we should get more accurate information.

It is not an uncommon thing for men starting out on the journey of life to get side-tracked, and once on the siding it is sometimes difficult or impossible to get off again.
Glasgow had great prospects as a preacher. He had a commanding physique, an appealing personality, and a most thorough intellectual training. He married a woman of fine character and with unusual initiative, and it looked at the outset
as if they were on the through train for power and influence in the community in which they established themselves. But Glasgow had scarcely started until he became side-tracked. He lost sight of the great principles of religion which make for better influence and better living and centered his attention upon the petty details of dogma, upon the unimportant differences which separate sects,
and gave all his energies to the emphasis of these things and he lost entirely the power and the influence which he might have exercised. Instead of being on the main line he spent his life puffing up and down a side track.

Bower is side-tracked. He had a chance twenty years ago with a firm
in which the greatest possibilities were open to him. But the salary was small and Bower wanted to make money at the outset. There was a girl he wanted to marry, and he could not wait. So he went with a smaller and less significant firm where the salary at the beginning was larger and the prospect of advancement less bright. That was a good many years ago, and Bower is making little more today than he was when he started and he is too old to change. He is permanently side-tracked.

French Cooks Are Economical And Possess No Power Of Legerdemain

By CHARLES SCOTTO, Chef,
Ambassador Hotel, Park Avenue, New York City.

FRENCH cooking has a magical sound in the ears of most American women, but there is, in reality, nothing magical about it. The French cook possesses neither the power of legerdemain, nor special ability that is beyond the reach of any woman of ordinary intelligence
who is willing to admit that cooking is an art worthy of both care and study.

Nor is French
cooking a strain
upon the pocketbook. The French are among the thrift-iest people in the world, and their cooks
share the national characteristic. Out-of-season delicacies
seldom appear in the French household. The French housewife concentrates upon achieving the best possible results with what the market can supply at reasonable prices, and her only magicism lies in her ability to do this to perfection.

In her use of vegetables for a wide variety of tempting salads, the French cook reaches one of her highest peaks of achievement. To reach a like peak of excellence it is necessary to take great care that the principal qualities of every salad—flavor, crispness and freshness—are not destroyed. With few exceptions, salads should be served very cold,
and all greens should be well dried before serving. A little sugar, in the dressing or added to the vegetable ingredients while cooking, accentuates the flavors.

Asparagus Salad—Cook the asparagus in salted water. The dressing consists of one-half teaspoon salt, a teaspoon teaspoon pepper, a half teaspoon sugar, a quarter teaspoon onion juice, one tablespoon vinegar, and five tablespoons olive oil. Mix and beat until thick and white. Keep the asparagus in the refrigerator until ready to serve. Then arrange the stalks on salad plates and serve the dressing in a sauceboat.

Frozen Tomato Salad—Peel and cut into fairly small pieces two cups
of ripe tomatoes. Add two cloves, two peppercorns, two tablespoons sugar, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon celery salt, one sliced onion,
a few grains of parsley, and two tablespoons vinegar. Boil for ten minutes, then press through a sieve.
Freeze to a mush. Beat a half cup of cream until stiff and add to the mush. Then completely freeze. Serve on crisp, thoroughly dried lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Vegetable Salad Melange—Cook
one cup of shredded string beans until tender in boiling, salted water, with one-half teaspoon of sugar. Do the same with one cup of shelled peas. Mix the peas and beans with one cup of shredded cucumber and one-half cup of thinly sliced radishes. Add French dressing and let stand a half hour. Meanwhile, hard-boil six eggs, halve them, and cut off the ends so that they will stand upright. Arrange the halves of the eggs on salad plates. Arrange crisp lettuce leaves around each egg half,
and place some of the vegetable mixture on the lettuce. Serve very cold with mayonnaise.

OUR POETS' CORNER

Old New England

The moon is shining brightly
Over hills of white and gray;
The merry sleigh bells jingle,
For a sleigh-ride's on its way.

The little brooks are laughing
As they trickle 'neath the ice;
There's a crispness in the tingling air,
That sets you up like spice.

The children's merry laughter
Tinkles out across the hills
Like ghosts of fairies laughing,
Like the laughter of the rill.

Oh, that's the place I long to be;
When mountain sides are white;
Just to be in old New England,
On a snappy winter's night.

OLD DEERFIELD INDUSTRIES ARE DRAWING CROWDS

The new "Old Indian House" was thrown open to the public in connection with the Old Deerfield Industries exhibition which will be held for the rest of the week, and hundreds of visitors inspected the unique structure. In order that it may be made more convenient for the public to visit the building, the hours have been extended on Friday and Saturday evenings from 6 to 9 in order that those engaged in business can come at that time.

Inside the house, many antiques of interest will be found. The upper north-east room has been furnished as an old time bedroom and here Miss Rachael Hanks displays her tatting work. The down stairs southeast room contains Miss Nellie Arms' loom and beautiful weavings while in the room opposite will be found the baskets of Mrs. Luenanna Thorn and weavings of Miss Susan Arms. Out in the great dining room, which faces the west, is an immense fireplace and oven, also the exhibits of Mrs. Gertrude Ashley and paintings of Mrs. Clara Alquist. On the walls are scenes of various types, exhibited mainly by Mrs. Mary Childs, while samples of Cornelius Kelley's iron work is also on display.

Interest is not only shown in the exhibits but in the beautiful workmanship of the house itself, which is a faithful reproduction of the original Old Indian house, torn down many years ago. William Gass, builder of the house is present to explain the house to visitors.

The Frary house will be thrown open to visitors on Friday and Saturday. No house in the valley is more celebrated for its charm and history than the early home of Samuel Frary, the Revolutionary soldier, and later of Salah Barnard, who added on the part containing the ballroom and bar for purposes of the Inn.

Academy Commencement

One hundred and six graduates were added to the several thousand alumni of Deerfield academy when on the occasion of the 130th commencement of the school, diplomas were presented by President Horace A. Moses of the board of trustees. The exercises were held in the beautiful old colonial brick church where alumni and friends of the school filled every available seat. The program, though brief, was impressive and dignified in the extreme.

A processional hymn opened the exercises, followed by invocation by Rev. Alden H. Clark. Then came the principal address of the occasion, by Dr. J. Edgar Park, noted educator and president of Wheaton college. Dr. Park is a speaker of exceptional force and during the half-hour that he spoke, he intertwined humor and reminiscence of travel in foreign lands with a theme of lofty ideals that carried a message of value to all who heard. He urged members of the members of the graduating class to "dare to be themselves" in facing the world, and to carry out with them the traditions of their school.

Sandy Mactavish got married. He went to Niagara Falls on his honeymoon. While strolling around the Falls he met a friend. After congratulating Sandy, the friend asked, "And where is the little bride? Back at the hotel?" "Oh no," replied Sandy, "I left her back in Philadelphia; she's seen the Falls."

Pa—Our electric light bill is considerably less than last month. How do you suppose that happened?
Ma—Well, for one thing, the vacuum cleaner was broken most of the month.

Oh, my love's like a red, red rose,
That's newly sprung in June—Burns.

Teacher—You'll have to stay in after school and work on your geography lesson. You didn't locate a single one of the cities.

Robert—I can't locate them but I know how to tune in on the whole lot.

DOMESTIC tragedies have their beginnings in small things not the least of which is tasteless or poorly prepared food. Normal, healthy people are notoriously fond of good meals and truly the way to a man's heart is through his stomach.

No man can neglect an electrically cooked meal. His appetite and health improve with food cooked on an electric range. You can taste the difference.

Electric Cookery, the modern method of converting raw food into palatable dishes, is healthful, economical, clean, and convenient.

And your Electric Range will remove any friction in the working of your household machinery by helping you to keep down expenses, for it is the most economical cooking stove you can use, saving Time, Labor, Fuel, and Food Values.

LAST MEET OF SEASON
OF P-T ASSOCIATION

The Parent-Teacher association held the last meeting of the season in Alexander hall last Monday evening.

Mrs. Ralph Felton of Ithaca, N. Y., a graduate of Columbia university, gave a very interesting talk on "Pre-School Education" and what to do in getting the small child ready to enter school. Mrs. Felton is an expert in this line of work and is about to receive a degree from Cornell university where she has majored in this subject.

Her idea is this: As parents, we should endeavor to teach our children co-operation, spend more time with them, even at a sacrifice of our own busy time which brings its many duties, teach them to be systematic in everything they do. Even the young baby a few weeks old can be taught that night is the time it should sleep and that crying does not always bring the desired result. The habits formed in the pre-school days up to the age of six and seven usually remain permanent through life or have a great deal of bearing on the character in future years.

After her talk and while refreshments were being served, all present drew about her in a circle and had a very informal and friendly discussion on the problems of parents and children, what to do, what not to do, when we should punish, when we should praise and, the meeting adjourned at 10 p. m., everyone present feeling they had passed a very pleasant and very profitable evening.

$755,000 PLEDGED TO
DESIRED $3,000,000
ENDOWMENT FUND

President Elliott Speer announced on Saturday to 900 returning alumnae, to representatives of eastern colleges and preparatory schools, and friends assembled to observe the 50th anniversary of Northfield Seminary, that $755,000 has been received and pledged toward the $3,000,000 which these schools are making an effort to raise for a teachers' retirement fund, salaries and endowment.

This amount includes a $100,000 bequest received this year from Henry C. Munger of Moore and Munger, importers, of New York city and Plainfield, N. J., $25,000 pledged by Wilfred W. Frey, head of N. W. Ayer and Son of Philadelphia, a pledge of $50,000 from John L. Grandin of Boston on condition that $2,000,000 be raised within a stated period, and an unconditional pledge of $50,000 from one of the schools' largest contributors, Harold C. Keith of the George E. Keith Shoe company, Campello, Mass., and Mrs. John S. Kennedy of New York are among others who have contributed to this fund.

Announcement also will be made of a pledged fund from Miss Jessie Munger of Plainfield, N. J., for the erection of a swimming pool and suitable building at Northfield Seminary in memory of her brother, Henry Munger.

During the past year, a larger amount has been contributed to these schools than in any previous year in their history. The $3,000,000 campaign now being launched is to meet the heavier financial needs of Northfield Seminary and Mount Hermon School, made imperative at this time largely because of the retirement of teachers who have served continuously on the faculty since the early days of the schools.

CAPE COLLAR

Nothing is more flattering to the average smart woman than cape collars so it was inevitable that they should step into a favored position in the fashion parade. They are especially becoming in the soft materials such as the popular printed chiffons and georgettes. The scalloped edge of this collar is very effective especially when bound in a contrasting tone of ribbon. The flounce-trimmed, two-piece skirt is attached in curved outline at the low waistline. For street wear this frock is made with long sleeves and revers replacing the collar. Pictorial Printed Pattern No. 4728. Sizes 14 to 42, 45 cents.

Sheep Breeding Important Source
Of Revenue To Farmers Of Canada

TORONTO, ONT.—"Sheep" is a word that threw the old-time American frontiersman into a rage that frequently found relief in blazing guns, but in Western Canada today, to be identified with sheep is a badge of respect and a sign of prosperity.

Canadian sheep owners had an exceptionally prosperous year in 1928, and the sheep population shows a steady increase, according to a bulletin by the Department of Colonization and Development of the Canadian Pacific railway.

"The 1928 wool clip averaged from 6 to 25 per cent above the prices obtaining during the previous season," says the bulletin, "and lamb prices remained on the same high level they were on during the 1927 season. The four western provinces and Ontario all showed gains in the sheep industry."

"Canada's western provinces and Ontario are particularly adapted to the raising of sheep. The rolling hills and well-watered pastures grow various kinds of short, sweet natural grass and white clover, specially adapted for sheep."

"Ontario sheep have brought many laurels to that province. Sheep breeders of the province have won many important prizes at the large American expositions, such as the World's Fair at Chicago, the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, the St. Louis Exposition, and the Annual International Livestock show at Chicago."

"New Brunswick lamb is much sought after in the markets of the United States, because of the excellent grain and flavor. There is room for large extensions of sheep raising in New Brunswick, both on the ordinary farm, where small flocks can always be kept to advantage, and upon rocky and rolling land not profitable for cultivation."
